Principal Clarinet of the Hong Kong Philharmonic, Andrew Simon has won acclaim on four continents for his brilliant musicianship, with Auditorium Magazine (Korea) hailing him as having "almost god-like technique". After the Juilliard School graduate made his debut in Carnegie (Weill) Recital Hall as winner of the Artists International Young Musicians Auditions Clarinet Award, he embarked on an international career, appearing as soloist and lecturer in the USA, Great Britain, China, Japan, Canada, Taiwan, Australia, New Zealand, Indonesia, Singapore, The Philippines and Portugal. The first American to perform in North Korea, Simon's concerto performances have included appearances with the Singapore Symphony, the Hong Kong Philharmonic and the West Australian Symphony Orchestra in a national radio broadcast.
